The pretravel consultation offers dedicated time to prepare you for health concerns that might arise during your trip. During the pretravel consultation, your provider will share information about potential health hazards, and how to manage risk by various means. Managing risk might include giving, or prescribing immunizations, emphasizing the importance of taking prescribed malaria prophylaxis and other medications, and educating you about steps you can take to address and minimize travel-associated illnesses.

As a courtesy, we will bill your insurance directly. Many insurance plans, however, do not cover travel services. You may be responsible for out-of-pocket copays, coinsurance, deductibles, and any amounts that are not covered benefits, as determined by your plan.

You should call your insurance company before your visit to verify benefits and out-of-pocket costs.
